LEARNING TO REMEMBER PRIMARY INSET

How to teach so students remember what you teach

OVERVIEW

The Teaching to Remember INSET is a wonderful opportunity for teachers to learn how to improve their own memories whilst experiencing the effectiveness of 14 powerful learning-to-learn techniques. This whole day, in-school training course is a multi-sensory, multi-media experience: highly interactive and packed with pupil-friendly, creative and hugely effective tools, tips, strategies, and methods.

Staff will be provided with a Teacher Reflective Journal, which allows them to reflect on their training in order to trial new ideas so that the ideas can be translated into long-term good practice. The Journal also has a reflection section so teachers can reflect on the process of keeping a journal.

In addition to being highly practical, this course is an entertaining, empowering and highly creative learning experience. Ideal for schools whose staff

- need a creative boost
- would like to incorporate memory-improvement techniques into their teaching.

During the course teachers will:

- discover how powerful their own memories are
- experience many practical ideas to make learning fun, rewarding and memorable
- be empowered with a range of learning to learn techniques.

The course has two main aims:

- to make teachers feel more confident in their own ability to remember things
- to provide teachers with instantly usable techniques.

VALUE

- This course is not only informative, but highly entertaining and interactive
- In addition to memory ideas, teachers will be shown a range of useful curriculum-specific strategies
- This course encourages teachers to become more reflective
- The course promotes the concept of teacher as researcher

RESULTS

This course encourages staff to remember, understand, apply, analyse, evaluate and create
